Claims Nos.: 44-47

Rule 39.1(iv) PCT - Method for treatment of the human or animal body by surgery

This International Searching Authority found multiple (groups of) inventions in this international application, as follows:

1. Claims: 1-43

A deformable medical implant comprising a body defining two anchor points, two elongate extensions, a bridge coupling at least two of said extensions and at least two hinges defined on at least one of said extensions. Method of distorting the medical implant.

2. Claims: 48-53

A catheter including an advance limiter adapted to carry a stent.

3. Claims: 54-57

A mesh stent.

The technical features of the first group of claims (claims 1-43) define an implantable anchoring element provided with a structure's distortion mechanism so that when is expanded on the patient's body a portion of the device exits the device's surface plane. The medical implant provides an alternative way of anchoring itself to the patient's body.

The technical features of the second group of claims define a catheter adapted to carry a stent. The catheter comprises an advance limiter. Apparently, the advance limiter solves the problem of placing the stent in the desired place.

The technical features of the third group of claims define a mesh stent with a mesh flared section adapted to flare out to more than 90 degrees. Apparently, it increases contact with the vascular tissue providing better anchoring capacity.

Different technical features are thus claimed for solving different problems. These are so different that no technical relationship can be perceived.

This international Searching Authority consequently invites the Applicant to pay two (2) additional search fees before all the inventions in this application can be searched.
